Decoration Processes

Pad Printing

Pad printing is a process where ink is transferred from an imaging plate to a substrate via a silicone pad. Common products for pad printing are: pens, keyrings, golf balls, stress shapes, torches and multi tools.

Embroidery

Embroidery is a tried and tested method of decorating fabric. With good digitizing and embroidery machines, stunning looking logos can be recreated using only stitches of cotton.

Laser Engraving

Laser engraving is a process in which a design is cut or burnt into a substrate using laser light. Laser Engraving is usually used on metal, glass or wood for permanent decoration.

Sublimation

Sublimation employs a printing process that uses heat to transfer dye onto substrates such as plastic, cards, paper, fabric and ceramic. This is great for full colour prints.

Screen Printing

Screen printing is the most common form of garment printing as it is cost effective and durable. Fine details and shading can be lost in screen printing and some artwork needs to be altered to suit.

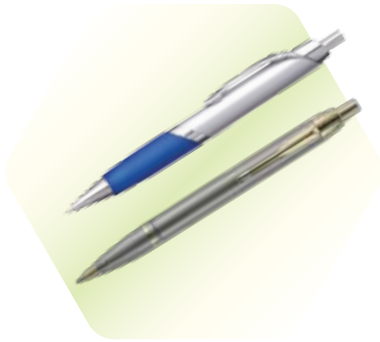

Digital

New technologies have enabled digital direct to substrate printing to become a reality. Full colour images can be reproduced on almost any substrate and are instantly cured through UV lamps to give great turnaround and stunning image quality.

AAA Safety Tags

AAA Safety Tags manufacture and stock a large range of standard and custom safety tags. Through innovative printing techniques, custom built eyeleting machines and a dedicated stringing and packaging team we consistently deliver high quality at low cost on both stock and custom tags. We only use 8mm brass eyelets meaning all tags can be used with a string or as a lock out tag with a padlock. High quality nylon strings are used to enhance protection in harsh mining and outdoor applications.

We have tags for all applications with an economy tag range which is printed on card and supplied with a 6mm drilled hole or our tearproof tags which are printed on a waterproof polypropelene material. We also have mylar encapsulated tamper proof tags for applications where information security is key. Tags are supplied in bags of 100 with a resealable opening for added value.

With custom printed tags, the options are endless. We can add client logos to our stock tag range or manufacture a fully customised tag with perforations and sequential numbering. AAA Safety Tags is a leader in the industry and whatever you requirement, we will have a solution.

Some common tags from our stock range used in the mining, industrial and construction industries include:

Information tags

Out Of Service tags

Danger tags

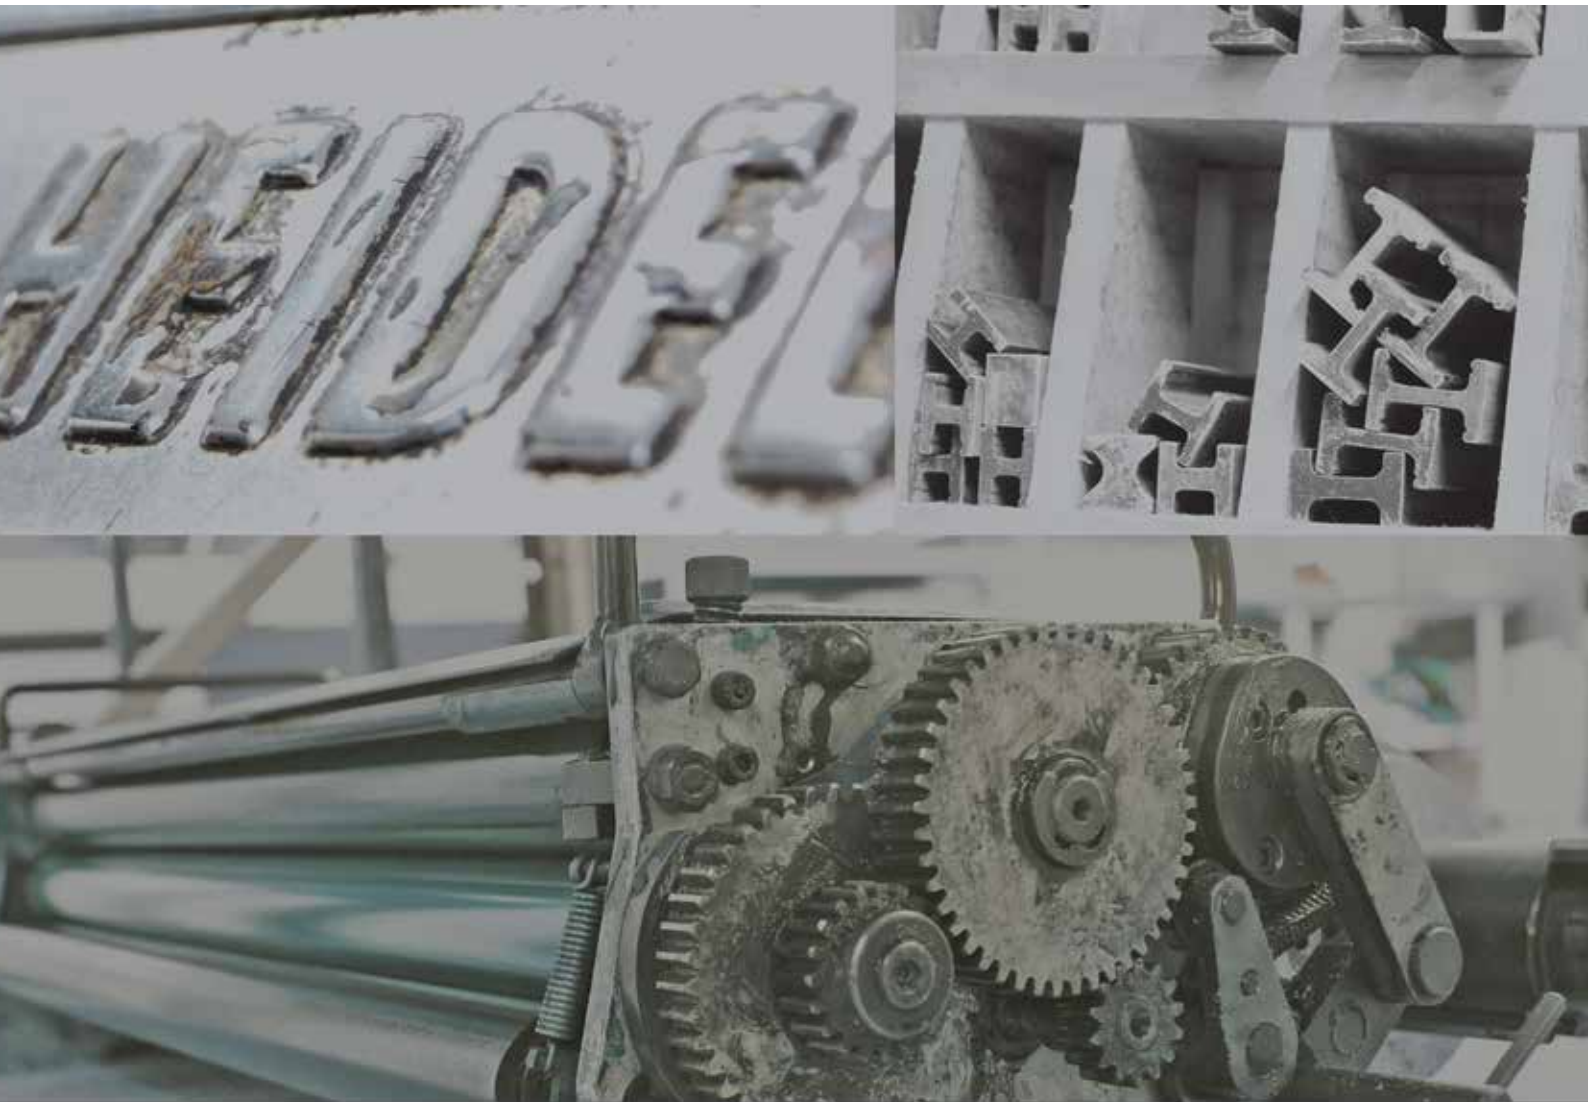

Isolation tags

Environmentally Friendly
